These titles were selected on the basis of their appeal to reading groups, which seek books that open up lively conversations about a myriad of timely and provocative and diverse topics, from the intimate dynamics of family and personal relationships to major cultural and world issues.

Great Group Reads Selection Committee Chair Kristen Knox says:

“The breadth and diversity of books the Selection Committee has chosen this year delights me – novels and memoirs exemplifying global perspectives which inform and challenge readers. Any and every book club will be able to find wonderful options that work for them no matter what type of book they want to read.”

(A full list of Selection Committee members can be found at the National Reading Group Month Web site, www.nationalreadinggroupmonth.org/ggr_committee.html.)

The National Reading Group Month Chair Jill A. Tardiff thanks the Selection Committee for its constancy and thoroughness and all the publishers who submitted titles and made reading copies via traditional galleys and eBook format available. Ms. Tardiff says, “Our goal is to have these outstanding and often inspiring titles become reading-group staples with facilitators and that booksellers and librarians across the country feature them during the month of October, which is, of course, National Reading Group Month—and, throughout the year.” She continues, “For that purpose, we provide a wide array of professionally designed display materials such as shelf-talkers and table-top posters on the National Reading Group Month website for anyone to download and use in promoting these titles. We encourage visiting the site for these and other features and tips.” (See National Reading Group Month Marketing Toolkit at Get Involved www.nationalreadinggroupmonth.org/involved.html).

The Women’s National Book Association wishes to thank Premier Sponsor of National Reading Group Month: Sourcebooks—An Independent Vision, as well as Friends of National Reading Group Month: American Booksellers Association (ABA), Andrew Carnegie Medal for Excellence in Fiction, Baker & Taylor—The Future Delivered, The Booklist Reader (Booklist, American Library Association), Edelweiss—Above the Treeline, Inc., Ingram Content Group, Net Galley—We Help Books Succeed, Reading Group Choices—Selections for Lively Book Discussions, Reading Group Guides—The Online Community for Reading Groups, and the Southern Independent Booksellers Alliance (SIBA).
