Women’s National Book Association’s 2020 Great Group Reads Announcement

NEW YORK — October 1, 2020 — The Women’s National Book Association (WNBA) announces the 2020 Great Group Reads selections.

Publishers, including the Big Five, academic presses, and small presses, submitted 223 books from their lists of books published between October 1, 2019 and September 30, 2020. A committee of 42 readers devoted themselves from February through July to determining the 20 books they believed were the best group reads of the past year.

Millions of readers belong to book clubs and reading groups, and Great Group Reads provides those groups, and those who read on their own, a curated list each year specifically designed to facilitate discussion and reflection.

“Once again the selection committee has chosen an outstanding collection of novels and memoirs to highlight for book clubs this year. The choices fit in beautifully with the difficult and necessary discussions we are having as a nation and in our own homes right now. They are provocative, engaging and diverse, and they offer book clubs of all stripes much to discuss and consider about our shared past, present and future,” said Kristen Knox, Great Group Reads chairperson.

Written by authors from a variety of backgrounds, the selections delve into thought-provoking topics such as racism, immigration, identity, love, grief and family. The books illuminate the human experience and allow readers to explore global social issues and personal relationships.
